Large Classic Towers Residences, Milan.

The project proposes a new residential building in a dense urban context of Milan, positioned at the intersection between Via Ludovico Ariosto and Via Ferrari. The design responds to the surrounding historical fabric through a strong volumetric presence, with a clear distinction between the building's lower, white, solid base, more permeable upper volumes, and a light, open top. The building hosts a mixed program combines residential units of different sizes with a public ground floor housing a café, exhibition space and a small wellness area. The ground floor is designed to maximize activation and public life. Material choices—Calacatta marble and bronze—reinforce the building's presence while ensuring its long-term durability, balancing permanence and adaptability.
